MISS HORSFALL THE GREAT HEIRESS.

EXTRAORDINARY IMPOSITION.

The Leeds Mercury says :- We lately publish-

P., and who has been committed to the next sessions of the Central Criminal Court on three distinct charges of em-Horsfall, the reputed niece of the rich member for Liverpool, she found, no difficulty in obtaining jewels, dresses, and other costly articles such as a young heiress with expensive tastes might be supposed to require; and, by dealing with her "uncle"—not the one whose name she bore, but an accommodating relation with a hooked nose, who sports the sign of the Three residing. This young gentleman (whom we shall call Frank, for the sufficient reason that Frank is not his name), was travelling on a business tour for his father, who is a most respectable manufacturer, residing in a suburb of Birmingham. Her conduct was not in every respect satisfactory, but the minds of those disposed to believe the best are easily satisfied, and as Miss Horsfall added hypocrisy in religious affairs to her other fatal accomplish ments, she managed to avoid detection for a time. The period for the wedding was fixed, young couple to reside in. This house Miss Horsfall undertook to furnish from her own private resources; and she proceeded to carry out that undertaking in a style which showed that her "resources" were as large as her tastes were extravagant. Tradesmen in London sent down furniture worth hundreds of pounds to order. There were four or five piano-fortes from different makers, chairs worth ten or twelve pounds each -much too good to sit upon; cushions to cover them-also too valuable for ordinary use; carpets, tables, and household "fixings" of all kinds, all in the same grand style. The stable had to be enlarged to make room for the splendid carriage horses sent down from London and special provision had to be made for the smart groom who came to tend them. While all these preparations were in progress Miss Horsfall was the guest of the family of which, according to the programme, she was soon to be a cherished member; and she endeavored to show her gratitude for the kindness of her new-found friends by loading them with costly presents. She was lavish with her wealth, and even tried to mix herself up in the business affairs of her dear papa that was to be. She offered Frank's father the use of several loose thousands belonging to her, if he chose to accept them; but the offer was declined, or "dear papa" might have been wheedled out of promis-

Once, when out in an open boat in a short chopping sea threatening to swamp us every minute, and cross waves like liquid obelisks starting up in all directions, while the boatmen had to keep a sharp look-out to save our little bark from capsizing, my companion, a person of no mean attainments, after careful observation of the waves, and, as I supposed, appreciation of our danger, suddenly exclaimed, "What a singular form of matter Water is!"

Whether in consequence of the high-strung feelings of the moment, or through the justice of the remark itself, it fixed itself in my memory: and frequently, whether beholding the great sea or a full bucket fetched from the pump; whether gazing at a mighty river, with its wealthy burdens, ever flowing onward, or borne on a lake in whose limpid depths you see waterfowl diving and fishes glancing; or stretched in a bath from a mineral spring, which is hot when it issues from the earth; the idea ever haunts me that I am in the presence of a wonderful creation under most remarkable conditions, and on a lake in whose limpid depths you see watercreation under most remarkable conditions, and I say to myself, again and again, "What a' singular form of matter Water is!"

Water is paradoxical and contradictory in its outward and apparent qualities. It is at once hard and soft, yielding and resisting. It gives way, when permitted to do so, with marvellous facility. The slightest and lightest substance dropped upon it is admitted to its embrace, in strict accordance and proportion to its deserts. outward and apparent qualities. It is at once children—consisting of a dozen solid little courtesies of those who sit heat those who heat those who sit heat those who sit he invalids cannot bear its excessive pliancy and complete adaptation to the form of the sleeper. Hence the notion of Descartes and others, that to explain the phenomena of water, its ultimate particles must be oblong, smooth, and flexible, lying one upon another like eels in a tub.

But water of a given temperature, confined, is of astounding hardness; it is as good as incomprehensible at that temperature: for what is a reduction of from forty-four to forty-eight millionth parts of its volumne under a pressure equal to that of the atmosphere? Many solid matters-woodfor instance-can be squeezed into a much smaller space than their original bulk; the packer's art has attained wonderful perfection in inclosing much in little space: but all the queen's horses and all the queen's men cannot put a quart of water into a pint bottle; the cleverest packer in London (which is saying a great deal) cannot economise the room of a great deal) cannot economise the room of a table-spoonful. You could sooner drive a nail into a solid cube of steel, than you could drive one into a cube of water enclosed in a perfectly ness conveys the notion of weight, transparent. Opaqueunyielding box. It is the unsqueesability of water which gives its enormous strength to the hydraulic press. The hardness of water may be felt by striking its surface smartly with the open hand; the quality is also known to unfortunate swimmers who, intending to pitch into the water headforemost, fall flat on their stomachs

The fickleness of seas and sea-like lakes arises from the extreme impressionability of water to outward influences. But while so movable and docile that the slightest inclination of its bottom causes it to flow in that direction, and the slightest breath on its surface raises a ripple, which is magnified into mountain waves by the impulsive force of stronger winds, water expands and contracts, in varying temperatures, only in quite a moderate degree.

To appreciate fully the value of what is, we may sometimes imagine what might be instead. Thus, what a blessing it is to the human race, to the animate world, to all organized nature. that water is not as expansible as oil! Great heats would cause rivers to overflow, animals to be smitten with apoplexy, sap-vessels to burst making every plant one wound, while seas in summer would inundate the coasts which had the misfortune to bound them. There is no abstract cause, no fundamental reason, why water should be not as expansible as oil. Happily, it is not so. On the contrary, the slight variation of which it is susceptible, tends to our advantage and convenience.

Pure water is at its greatest density or heaviest and most contracted, at four degrees, centigrade (to avoid fractions), or at exactly thirtynine degrees of Fahrenheit, that is at seven degrees above the freezing point; but if the temperature changes, either way, the water expands. From the maximum density up to the boiling point, the expansion amounts to four visible or tangible foe alone; these men have like, too, our breakfasts—in their simplest character; the fleshest and coolest of butter, threest of milk, and the delicious "close" white a survey work, but it was sure, and he was conditite rolls, all of which, in many a morning walk, I have see: dhe cleanest of conflortable to the conflortable to the WATER.

He trouble, and making enough to cover it to the depth of a quarter of an inch, on the top of which he poured boiling water in considerable quantity. The caloric was so slowly transmitted from the boiling water to the ice, that, at the end of two hours, only half of it was melted. But if, instead of fixing the ice at the bottom, it is allowed to swim on the surface, it is rapidly melted by the successive transport of the molecules of hot water from the bottom of the vessels up to the top, where the ice is. This experiment shows us what consequences we should have to suffer were our rivers and lakes to freeze from the bottom, as just now supposed. In the temperate zones, the larger masses of water would become perennial glaciers which no summer heat could liquify.

Air is said to be an invisible, water a visible to us only fluid. But very clear water is visible to us only from the effects of its refraction and because we look down upon its surface. Were we in it, like fish, it would be as invisible to our eyes as air is; although distant objects would be tinged with blue or green, as distant mountains are ment that water is wet; for Aristotle calls it a humid element. Mercury is fluid without being wet; and unmixed oil can hardly be called damp pure water. When water is sufficiently charged with foreign matters—gases, salts, or metallic compounds—to exert an appreciable action on the animal economy, it is called mineral water. In this sense, the sea is a mass of mineral water. Many mineral springs issue from the earth at diverse localities. Mineral rain, even, has fell; smelling offensively of had owns and beingstone. smelling offensively of bad eggs and brimstone, being condensed from the vapors of sulphure-ous springs. There is also a striking contrast between the clearness of water and its weight, some of the heaviest waters being the clearest. To look down into the lakes of Geneva or Lucerne at the ends of exit, or into the seas which skirt some of the ricky coasts of Scotland, or of the Mediterranean, you would say that it was only air a little more dense than usual and rendered of the opposite quality. Yet water, even the freshest and sweetest, is seriously heavy. To be convinced of the fact practically, letch a few pailsful f.om the neighboring well, or sustain the shock of a well-directed douche, or even submit yourself to the fall of a shower-bath. The waves of a rough sea are battering-rams which, by their mere weight, dash men down as if they were insects. The heaviness of water has, naturally and properly, caused it to be selected as the standard of weight in the Metrical System. A cubic centimetre of distilled water at the temperature of its greatest density, that is to say, at thirty-nine degrees Fahrenheit, gives the gramme, of which all other weights gives the gramme, of which all other weights are either multiples or fractions. Reason tells us that water must be heavy indeed, to allow really heavy bodies to float upon it; but it looks light. Mud, certainly, does not look light, but looks heavier than it really is.

The specific gravity of water is represented by unity, or one. It serves as the measure for determining that of other bodies, as that of air does for that of other gases. Owing to the con-traction of cold, water is about one-sixtieth heavier in winter, than in summer. The specific gravity of water being one, that of gold is nine-teen and a half nearly. How heavy gold is, no one can realise who has not had an opportunity of handling it in quantity-in bullion, coin, or

With the exception of belief in the Unity of God, there is probably no sentiment which enters more thoroughly and persistently in our Jewish national and devotional life than the aspiration for peace. We sing of peace in our Psalms; we pray for it, frequently and passionately, in our prayers. Peace is the last blessing in the threefold Benediction of the priests. A in the threefold Benediction of the priests. A petition for peace concludes the prayer of the petition for peace concludes the prayer of the Eighteen Blessings; peace the last of David's Lineful words that strike the ear as the Law is borne through our congregagation to its resting borne through our congregagation to its resting place. The familiar prop in which language alphace. The familiar prop in which has most exhausts itself in praise, and which has most exhaust exhausts itself in praise, and which has most exhaust exhausts itself in praise, and which has most exhaust exhausts itself in praise, and which has most exhaust exhaust exhausts itself in praise, and which has most exhaust exhaust exhausts itself in praise, and which has most exhaust exh so solemn an association with our mournful hours, contains a supplication not only for peace, but for "the abundant peace, the fullness of peace from Heaven." Peace is the wish we proffer to each other in our national salutation; and our sages, who are lavish in their praises of peace and peace-making, tell us that the pro-motion of peace is the pursuit of the wise, the duty of all men, and the highest of social virtues. Peace is a sacred condition with which we invest the mystery of death, and a supreme bliss which we picture as one of the glories of the life to come.

It is easy to indicate a likely historical reason for the recurrence of this sentiment. In the for the recurrence of this sentiment. In the fighting days of yore, when we were politically a nation, our country was placed among hostile states and exposed to continual wars and incursions. Moreover, civil dissension was unhappily not unknown among us. To a people so situated, and especially an agricultural people, with fields to till and protect, the advent of peace would be a predominant desire. When we ceased to be a polity, and were scattered among other nations, we were long exposed to aggression and injury we were long exposed to aggression and injury from governments and governed. Our early history presents a picture of almost continual disquiet. Well may the hope of peace have been a prevailing sentiment in the heart and on the lip of priest, prophet, poet, and people, in those troubled days. Anxiously must our fathers have prayed for the blessing promised in Leviticus, "And I will give peace to the land."

But in these calmer times, when, save in exceptional cases, we are protected from injury, we desire peaceful lives, whether cheered by even in countries where Israel is despised; prosperity or chilled by sorrow; if we establish when we have mingled so intimately with our fellow citizens that hostilities affect us only as they affect them, and our hearts throb with theirs in prayer for peace and enthusiasm in war; the constantly recurring Jewish call for peace ceases constantly recurring Jewish call for peace ceases. to have a distinctive political significance. not on that account has it lost its moral significance. But not on that account has it lost its moral significance, or diminished in its importance. For if war has ceased from our border; Association for the Diffusion of Knowledge. ance. For if war has ceased from our border; if we may till our fields and pursue our avocations in tranquillity, without fear of foreign invader or civil tumult; there is yet war in our midst, war in our hearts, an invader's step on the threshold, an enemy on the broad fields of humanity, and in the narrow inclosure of our conscience, which can only be met by an appeal to Divine Grace for peace, for "the fulness of peace from heaven."

Many may have observed in human nature the presence of two antagonistic principles, struggling for mastery, and contrasted as distinctstruggling for mastery, and contrasted as distinct—similar catastrophe beter one of the weatthest ly as light and darkness. Such antagonism and most populous districts in the province of Valencia. The river Jucar, which has its source fantastic notions of Ormuzd and Ahriman, and a more spiritual teaching has presented in the good and evil genii of the baby's cradle. Such tricts of Spain. the contrast of happiness and sorrow in man life, such the struggle for right and wrong

He who rules all breasts, and knows all secrets, can alone pronounce as to degrees of earthly can alone pronounce as to degrees of earthy happiness; but if the history of humanity, if reflection and worldly knowledge, if personal experience may guide us, we may inter that none can expect perfect happiness in this life; and those who seek it, seek a delusion, and a spare.

On the other hand, we need never be completely unhappy; there is no sorrow without a The poorer classes, whose houses were of one consolation, no shadow so dense as wholly to story only, were obliged to get on the roofs to obscure the light; for divine mercy flecks the heaviest cloud with threads of gold, and in the darkest hour we may pray—we may hope for

And he who prays for peace, prays a wise prayer. For him to whom the gates of peace are opened, prosperity cannot too much elate, nor adversity deject; his heart no passion can madden, no wild ambition torture with restless dreams, no broken hope nor disappointed aim irritate with bitter regret. In the hour of its keenest joy it will not be lost in delirium of rapture, nor intoxicated in phantasies of impos-sible delights; nor agitated by restless desire of change or shadowy presages of evil. In the day of its affliction, though blinding tears may for a while conceal the radiant presence of peace, yet so surely as the sun pierces the morning mist with its ruddy glow, so surely will the peace that we pray for break through the viel of sorrow, and lay her healing hand on the bleeding wound!

And now as to the struggle between good and evil. To whom is that fight unknown? The campaign begins in the bosom of the child, battling between the attraction of appetite and the desire to obey. From the nursery and the school-room to the after scenes of life, wherever placed, the home, the counting-room, the forum, the cottage, the palace, wherever tempta-tion rises in our way, like a gaunt ghost with fair face and shrouded ugliness, or like the tor-menting figure of the old German story, with its alluring arms and its spiked embraces, there the genius of good and the genius of evil fight for mastery—there war is waged between right and wrong, duty and passion, principle and im-

We, who are growing weary with the struggle, may well ask if to this war there be an ending, if there be a day when the darkness of night will pass, and peace be proclaimed, before at length the last silent peace of the grave stills length the last silent peace of the grave stills the throbbing breast? Yes, when we pray for peace, may it not be peace in this life? Peace peace, may it not be peace in this life? Peace that may be won, as other peace is won, by hard that may be won the structure.

For it is a great the water, and clinging desparately to the trunk example: we can promote peace in the family Empoli, the viaduct at Montelupo is destroyed by friendly counsel to our equals, and by reand thus work material service to the land in which we are born. We can promote peace in the earth by advocating the high doctrine of humanity, which sets its foot on wrong, and strives to a height far beyond the loftiest trophies of ambition, or the haughtiest majesty of imperial thrones.

Thus we can promote peace outwardly in the world, and by that effort promote peace inwardly in our hearts; we can spread around us a peace of earth, like a sun-picture of the spiritual peace we ask from heaven for ourselves.

And then, how often soever the prayer for peace be repeated amongst us, it will be no idle repetition. If we promote peace in our families, and among Israel our brethren; if we advocate peace among mankind at home and abroad; if spoken to us or by us!

INUNDATIONS IN ITALY AND SPAIN.

A correspondent of the London Morning 11, furnishes the following details of the inundation in Valencia:

"The news of the hurricane at Calcutta had just reached us by telegraph when a somewhat, similar catastrophe befel one of the wealthiest

"On the night of the 3d there was a copious fall of rain, which continued on the morning of the 4th, and towards the evening it seemed as if the windows of heaven had opened. Before midnight, the towns of Culera, Alciro, Carcagente and Jativa, with many adjoining villages, vere submerged in water.

"In Alcira alone upwards of two hundred houses near the banks of the river were completely swept away; others have fallen since, and many have had their foundations sapped. save themselves from being drowned. Thousands from their house-tops enxiously looked for the morning. There was no escape. The water had risen to a height of six or eight feet in the highest part of the town—in the lower part whole houses were covered. In the convent of Carcagente the water was lifteen feet deep. Except cats and dogs not a single domes-tictic or farm animal has been left alive. Now that the waters have subsided, the streets and houses are full of dead carcasses of horses. mules, donkeys, pigs, goats and sheep. On the first entrance into the town twenty-one corpses were found in the streets; how many more are to be found in the houses that have fallen, how many drowned in their beds, and how many swept away with the flood, no one presumes to estimate. Already above one hundred corpses have been taken to the church; but there is no place of interment for them, scarcely a vestige of the cemetry having been left.

"About one hundred square miles—the most fertile and populous that the province of Valencia can boast of—have been inundated. From many places no information has, as yet, been obtained, and in this letter I have confined myself principally to what has occurred at Alcira, as being the largest and most important town in the district. Albalat, a village near Alcira, was completely under water. From the nearest approach only the steeple of the church could be seen. "A royal decree has been issued by the Spanish Government for the opening of a national subscription in aid of the sufferers.

"The Correspondencia of Madrid states that one thousand and two head of cattle and one hundred and sixty-eight domestic animals have been drowned; two hundred and seventeen complete submission; never till we lay down our impulses as the Romans of old laid down their arms, and pass humbled, bowed, and broken, under the yoke of the law, as they under the Caudine yoke of their victors.

Ing of the Arno, and food and other necessaries are conveyed to the inhabitants by means of boats. The commune of Signa, lying between Florence and Empoli, was reduced to great distress by the encroachments of the swollen river, and a train was sent from Florence with pro-If we disdain habitually the summons to do rightly, and yield to temptation, there can be last train from Leghorn having arrived safely, no peace for us: "There is no peace for the wicked!" in the dense darkness it was not perceived that at a distance of four chilometres from the city,

We can promote peace in which we worship to promote peace in the circle in which we made its appearance at Bologna, which, as you know, is more favorably situated in regard to climate than either Turin or Milan, and this circumstance is regarded as indicative of a severe winter.

"According to last advices the danger is over or at least suspended. The Arno has returned to its bed, although it remains still much above its usual level, and repairs are being carried on with vigor in the recently flooded quarters of Florence. But a few days have produced on the central Italian railways a series of disasters which will interfere for some time to come with which will interfere for some time to come with the promptness of our communications with that part of the country."

RAMS.

When the rebel ram Merrimac butted th wooden frigate Congress and sunk her, two years ago, there was a very general and long-continued cry for rams. "Ramming is the continued cry for rams. "Ramming is the thing," said enthusiasts; and for awhile there was little else thought of for offense or defense should an enemy enter this harbor. The case of the North river steamer Empire, which some years ago ran into a heavy pier at the foot of 29th street, and went half through it without material injury, was deemed an example of what a ram could do. Some persons argued thus :- "A tallow candle can be shot through a board; ergo, a light steamer can cut down a heavier one, no matter how strong, provided she can obtain sufficient speed." Instances were cited: where ships had collided it was shown that the vessel struck was demolished, while the other was unhurt, although the weaker. From these and similar premises it was, and is A correspondent of the London Morning argued that of all the ships a ram-ship would be the most formidale. Assuming the points taken by the ram advocates to be correct, although they are far from being so, a ship is not a board, neither has it the velocity of a bul-let. A solid structure, such as a crib filled in with stone, bears no resemblance nor has it any conditions identical with a ship floating on a vielding medium like water; nor yet can one ship butting another in the ribs, aiming at the adversary's weakest, and striking with its cision to the President of the Fair, Judge Thornstrongest part, be fairly quoted as the invincithe assailed. But admitting that they are corcorrect in the main, what does it prove? That rams are essential, that they are reliable, that the action itself is always an efficient one, that a heavy ram may run down a heavier armed ship? Not at all. The results in Mobile Bay and the action in Albemarle Sound both prove that ramming a ship by no means insures its destruction. Even the gallentry of the different commanders in these several combats could not overthrow physical forces, or do away with them. The Sassacus, a wooden side wheel ship, while moving at the rate of eleven knots, ran at the Albemarle, a rebel iron-plated ram, and struck her. She failed, however, to destroy the rebel vessel, although she pushed it before her for a long distance. The Saesocus was a light vessel, and ill-fitted for an encounter with such a craft, as, in addition to being built of wood, her stem has a rudder in it which of course weakened it very much. In Mobile Bay the results were the same. The Tennessee was repeatedly rammed by heavy ships at high speed, but these attacks were futile and only amaged the assailants. It will not do to rely solely upon a possibility in naval warfare. Success must be assured as far as possible, and victory lies not in rams but weight of metal; in guns stood up to, and broadsides hurled unceasingly. An unremitting fire from heavy guns in ships, practicably invulnerable, will hereafter win the day, and rams solely, are of little worth. When opportunity serves, the momentum of a heavy body at even a moderate velocity, like a ship, may effect more than a broadside, but the chances for a fair blow in an action between two ships alone are very few, and a skillful seaman can always parry one. We have ships of iron, and guns of iron; we have also hearts of iron to man and manœuvre them, and these will, as heretofore, continue to maintain our national renown upon the sea.—Scientific American.

Power of a Bird's Sono.—When we hear the song of the souring lark, we may be sure that the entire atmosphere between us and the bird is filled with pulses, or undulations, or waves, as they are often called, produced by the little songster's organ of voice. This organ is a vibrating instrument, resembling, in principle. the reed of a clarionet. Let us suppose that we hear the song of a lark, elevated to a height of five hundred feet in the air. Before this is possible the bird must have agitated a sphere of air one thousand feet in diameter—that is to say, it must have communicated to seventeen thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight tons of air a motion sufficiently intense to be appreciated by our organs of hearing.—Tyndall's Glaciers of the Alps.

ARTIFICIAL IVORY.—The possibility of pro-curing a substitute for ebony and ivory has be-come an important question, now these materials command such extravagant prices. M. Ghoulston Ghislain has brought before the French Academy a substance which he asserts answers the purpose completely. He produced it by the following method: Take sixty per If the evil grow and strengthen from the hour of its feeble and timid first assault till the day of its maturity, we shall have a giant not a dwarf to fight. But there is a battle in which we need never succumb. Divine help is for those who seek it by daily, hourly sustained endeavor, unchecked by failure, unappalled by doubt or difficulty. If any effort, if many an effort, fail, let us not fear. If we find the enemy beyond our strength to-day, let us take courage and gather our forces to meet him on the mor-

Having heard to-day for the first time that the Grover and Baker Sewing Machine Company claim the first Premium on Sewing Machines and Sewing Machine Work at the Oregon State Fair, held at Salem, 1864, and being one of the Committee on Sewing Machines and Sewing Machine Work at said Fair, I feel it my duty to make, and take pleasure in making, the following state-

Three (if not all) of the Committee were selected by a Mr. Johnson, (an employe of the Grover & Baker Company,) and after a careful examination of the Sewing Machines and Machine Work on exhibition, and a long consultation, it was finally decided and agreed by the Committee, TO AWARD THE FIRST PREMIUM TO THE FLO-RENCE MACHINE AS THE BEST MACHINE FOR DOING ALL GRADES OF WORK, and a Premium to the Grover & Baker Machine for embroidery; and the Committee reported such decision to the President of the Fair, Judge Thornit without reading it, the other member of the Committee having been called away. The above is a true statement of the views of the Committee and their final decision.

SEPTEMBER 29th, 1864.

We, the undersigned, a Committee appointed at the Fourth Annual Fair of the Oregon State Agricultural Society to examine and report upon the merits of different Sewing Machines on exhibition, have endeavored to perform the duty with care and impartiality. In view of all the facts, we have decided to award the First Premium to the Grover & Baker Machine, and the Second to the Florence. The principal fact influencing our decision in awarding the First Premium to the former, was the circumstance that it embroidered. while the other does not. We have, however, no hesitancy in saying that both have great merits. and we recommend them both to the patronage of the Oregon public.

We would most respectfully invite those of our country subscribers who are in arrears for THE HEBREW, now in the city making their winter purchases, to call at our office, 509 Clay street, at their earliest convenience and discharge their indebtedness. Country patrons generally would favor us by forwarding their subscriptions either by post or express.

THE KARENS.

That portion of the northern provinces o India bordering on Thibet and China, recently ceded to England, is inhabited by a tribe called Karens, who from the peculiarities of their religious observation as well as actions in ordinary life, have awakened the curiosity of savans, under the belief that in them they have at last discovered the descendants of at least one of the Lost Tribes. A slight knowledge of this people was obtained as early as 1835, but it is not until lately their existence and customs have been thought worthy the attention of the traveler or philologist. It is alleged that the Israelitish characteristics of their descent are fully seen-first, in their domestic habits second, in their personal appearance and dress and third, in their religious traditions and expectations. In point of domestic civilization they are really higher than almost any people of the East, for the women occupy the same position among them as they do now among the Hebrew and other civilized nations, and thus they prove their virtue and intelligence. They regard polygamy as a sin, and honor the wife and mother as entitled to rule alone in her department of the household. Their only imfor intoxicating liquids, in which they are not alone, nationally speaking. Intemperance, however, is not an ordinary affair with them, it is an extraordinary one; it is not the degradation of daily madness, but is only exhibited in honor of visitors and at the recurrence of a festival. Their hospitality to strangers of every class is extremely generous. Their dwellings are better arranged for preserving the decencies of life and comforts than is usual among Asiaties; the cooking, working and sleeping rooms being separate. They are industrious, raising large supplies for themselves and for the market. Their books and dress are Jewish. No people ever honored the beard as the Hebrews and the Karens, with the latter, they have a saying, · A man with a beard belongs to the race of ancient kings." Their dress, it is said by Christian missionaries, may be described in the words of John, concerning that of the ancient Jews. The tunic of the men is embroidered in the weaving, but that of the women with the needle, as it was in ancient days. It is even said that they wear the non (taleth), and go through a ceremony resembling the pan (tephilin).

The traditions of the Karens are said to be striking indications of their Israelitish origin but whilst they acknowledge the Supreme Being they endeavor, like all the superstitious and ignorant, to propitiate evil spirits-but the latter custom may have been derived from contact with the neighboring tribes, Birmese and Buddhist. The Karens are divided into two sects, one sacrificing hogs and fowls to evil spirits; the other, termed the Purai, (striking analogy to pure) will not so sacrifice, and regard hogs with detestation. The latter say they formerly offered oxen in sacrifice. In reference to their ritual, they state that God (Yoowah) gave them His word written on leather, (parchment,) and their hymn of praise is translated thus:

"He was in the beginning of the world; God is endless and eternal;
He was in the beginning in the world;
God is unchangeable and eternal;
He existed in ancient times at the beginning." There is a strange connection in the above with the opening lines of Genesis:

ברשת בר אלהם את השפים ואת הארץ "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth."

Their traditions confirm in a marked degree the Mosaic account of the creation of the world, the fall of man, etc., and their moral code contains the substance of every injunction in the Decalogue. This is more remar fact that though the Karens are in the midst of image worshippers, their moral code forbids idolatry. They say "we have no King, because we feared not God,"-using the very words of Hoses, x. 3. Though they deem themselves wanderers and outcasts, under a curse for their transgressions, yet they assert that God loves Lazard Freres, one of the largest mercantile them. They entertain the strongest confidence n God, that they shall be restored to a Royal State, "where they shall dwell in the city with which are quite an architectural addition to our the golden palace." They entertain a strong fast growing city.

belief in a return to their forefathers, and pray: Though the flowers fade, they bloom again; That Jehovah (Toowah) may bring the mountain Let us pray, both great and small,
That Jehovah may prepare the mountain height;
Friends and brethren let us pray."

The coming of the Karen King or Messiah is indicative that the nation could not have derived its origin from any other than Jewish source, as they do not trust in a Saviour who has come, but one that is to come. In their mode of worship the Karens not only compose them, with the aid of rude instrumental music. alternately by opposite choirs, male and female. With but a portion of the people the rite of circumcision is maintained. All these points are to the Lost Tribes.

WHAT, THE JEWS DO. Puring the late Presidential campaig

constantly iterated and reiterated by the antagonistic to the administration and even to the Union, and stated, that the Jews only confined themselves to mere money changing and certain branches of commercial business, the principal line of which was ready-made clothing. Our people were stigmatized as usurers, and nonproducers. In no State in the Union do the Jews represent so many different avocations, trades, etc., than in California. They are farmers, wine-growers, wool-growers, rancheros, herdsmen, dealing in cattle and sheep; they are manufacturers on a large scale, and but for their energy and wealth the woolen factories of San Francisco would not be the proud monumeuts of our State's greatest growing interest. In the echanical arts they have always taken a forward position, workers in iron, tin, silver and gold carpenters, cabinet-makers, machinists, black white-smiths, and scientific instrument makers. In the walks of science, physicians, surgeons, apothecaries, chemists, assayers, geologists, pathologists, etymologists and astronomers; divines, theologists, lawyers, editors, engravers, lithographers, musicians, artists and painters; professors of foreign tongues, arithmeticians, poets, printers, gymnasts and sailors. Scarce a branch of mechanical art or avenue of trade but we find representatives of our race. and they are men and women of mark in all. In addition to these are miners, capitalists and merchants. Who now will attempt to gainsay that the Hebrew people do not form a promi nent integral part of the great commonwealth of California? To this is to be added that the Hebrew is not a nomad. When once he settles u camornia ne pecomes a resident, identified and aiding in its progress. He marries, gathers around him a family, strives to be and is honest. and his perseverance and probity are notable in this age of selfishness, so he lives his allotted days under his "own vine and fig tree," surrounded by his olive branches, until his days have passed and he is called to his "Father above." Take Hebrew energy and capital from California and the State would be bankrupt.

At a meeting of the Congregation Emanu-El, held on Sunday, January 22, 1865, the following gentlemen were elected Supervisors of the Home of Peace Cemetery for the ensuing year: D. Stern, S. Greenbaum, J. Cerf, S. Hass. During the year ending Jan. 1, 1865. there have been 39 interments in this cemetery 35 of whom died in this city, 1 in the State, 2 in Oregon and 1 in Nevada; 14 were adults. 2 between the ages of 5 and 10 years, 13 between the ages of 1 and 5 years, 5 under 1

SUDDEN DEATH .- Simon S. Fulda, a young nan nineteen years of age, dropped dead whilst running to the fire alarm on Thursday evening last. A Coroner's inquest was held on Friday, and it was found that death was caused by disease of the heart. He was an active and industrious young man, and the support of a family wholly depended upon him. His funeral took place on Sunday afternoon, from the residence of his parents on Everett street, attended by South Park Hose Company, of which he was one of the most active members, and delegations from the various hose companies and a host of friends. The remains were interred in the Home of Peace Cemetery. The Rev. Dr. Henry performed the funeral service and delivered an appropriate address in English.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR DECEMBER.

The close of the present year is characterized by great luxury in the materials used for winter resses. Velvet pile cloths, plushes and velvety ancy articles, issued at 16s. and upwards per pard, are advertised by all the marchands de nouveautes in repute. These winter novelties are warm without being heavy, and much care and taste have been employed in their produc-tion. They will be of good service for the pardessus of the 1864-5 winter season, esecially for the Recamier pardessus. However, the paletot, of which the Recamier pardessus is but a variety, is certainly more fashionable than any other description of outer garment. The Harouda sortie de bal is worthy of special remark, as it is new both in form and arrangement, and is now generally adopted, instead of the somewhat antiquated opera cloak of previ-

Bonnets are still worn very small, and continue to be so throughout the winter; but their size does not interfere with their comfort, as they fit closely to the head and cover the ears. The little lace fall is indispensable. The time honored bavolet is almost entirely abandoned, its place being occupied by the hair, covered

We may conclude our last article on the Paris fashions for this year by remarking that complete revolution seems to have taken place in the modes during the past twelvemonth. Such strange and such curious costumes have rarely been seen in so short an interval, during which ladies perfectly comme il faut have alter nately, not to say sometimes simultaneously atronized boots, coats, canes and casquettes, vithout, after all, sacrificing any of their per sonal attractions, which, fortunately, they can-not abdicate by any fashion freak. The Parisiennes think that they add to their charms by these originalities; and the latest sign of this closing season of artifice is the open unnouncement by the principal coiffeurs of ringlets at so much per dozen, for wearing under the bonnet or by he side of a bow.

BALL DRESS.—Robe of white tulle over satin skirt ornamented with a deep ruched flounce. THE BONES OF THE BOURBONS.

During the French Revolution in August, 793, the Convention published a decree ordering that the dust of the French Kings should be taken from their cerements in the vaults of the Abbey of St. Denis, and be thrown into a tomb was found a coffer about two feet in common trench : Five days sufficed to rifle and demolish no fewer than fifty-one tombs, and violate the sanctity of more than a thousand years. In the tombs of hollowed stone of the earlier monarchs. very little worth notice was found. In that of King Pepin there was a small quantity of gold wire, nothing more, but each coffin bore the simple inscription of the name of its inmate on a-leaden plate, and the greater part of these lates were much oxydised, and in a very bad ondition, so that the names were, in many instances, nearly illegible. The plates, however, were not wanted for preservation, but, together with the leaden coffins of Philippe-le-Hardi and Isabella of Aragon, and the leaden roof of the abbey church, were taken to the Hotel de Ville of Paris, and there melted down, and cast into musket-balls. The most remarkable object discovered was a silver seal, of ogive form, belongng to Constance of Castile, the second wife of Louis the Seventh, who died in 1160. It weighed three ounces and a half, and, silver noney being out of fashion, was not converted into either cash or bullets, but found its way to the municipal stronghold, and was thence transferred to the cabinet of antiquities of the National (not the Imperial) Library. Though only three days' labor were actually bestowed, the work of demolition was, from various causes, suspended from August till October, but on the twelfth of that month it was resumed, and with renewed vigor the destroyers forced their way nto the vaults of the Bourbons. The first coffin they met with, was one which might have demanded forbearance, had there been any forbearing spirit in the midst of so much unhallowed ruffianism; it was that of Henri Quatre! His body was in a good state of preservation, and his features were perfectly recognisable; the winding sheet by which he was enveloped was in good condition. For two days his remains were exposed to public view then they were remorsely cast into the yawning trench which awaited them. The same fate awaited the bones of Louis the Thirteenth and his descendants. The first-named monarch was recognised by his moustaches, and Louis the Fourteenth by his prominent features; but his face, that face which had received so much adoration in his lifetime, was now black as ink. To this complexion had it come at last! The bodies of his immediate family, and especially that of the Grand Dauphin-oh, grandeur !were in a state of liquid putrefaction. The hearts of some of the primes were found under the coffins, encased in lead with enameled inscriptions; the lead was carefully taken away.

the withered hearts were tossed with howls and the election of officers will take place and business of the greatest importance will be brought before the meeting.

The withered nearts were tossed with nowis and execrations into the common fosse. On the fifth day, after having taken all the bodies, which were regularly interred in the toyal vault, the depredators came, at the further end, to another coffin, placed on a stone bench about two feet from the ground, in a recess formed in the thickness of the wall. The situation of this coffin showed that it was that of the last king who had died, which always occupied the recess in question till his successor came to replace him. In this instance, the successor never came. As if open day were necessary for fully Bourbons in the person of the one, ill-called, "Le bien aime." the coffin of Louis the Fifteenth was dragged from the crypt to the brink of the trench and there opened. The body taken out of its leaden case, and swathed like a mummy, appeared to be in good preservation; but the iustant the bandages were removed the royal corpse took its revenge on the surrounding multitude. It was, as might have been expected, considering the disease of which the profligate king died, in a state of the direct putrefaction, and from the loathsome carcase came so pernicious an odor that all present fled from it in dismay. At length, in order that the Jacobin body-snatchers might complete their purpose, recourse was had to the firing of muskets, and burning of gunpowder to purify the air, and when the fumigation had lasted long enough, the blackened fragments of royalty were hurled into the pit on a bed of quick lime-somewhat different that from the sumptuous couch at Versailles!-and very quickly concealed from

After the Bourdon vault had been emptied the resting-places of the kings of the House of Valois, who were buried in the several chapels of the abbey church, had their share of the general desecration. The first tomb opened was that of Charles the Fifth, the wisest and best of his race. Here, of the king himself, were found nothing but mouldering bones; but the emblems of his state had survived him undimmed in splendor-his enameled gold crown, his silver hand-of justice, and a golden sceptre five feet long, surmounted by acanthus leaves of silver gilt, shining as bright as when first it was given to the dead monarch's grasp. In the coffin of Jeanne de Bourbon, his wife, many regal relics greeted the eye: part of her crown, a ring of gold, fragments of bracelets and small golden chains, a distaff of gilt wood, almost rotten, and long pointed shoes, half destroyed, embroidered in gold and silver. In the coffin of Charles the Seventh, a singular mode of embalming became apparent, the king's body being sprinkled all over with quicksilver, which had kept all its fluidity. This custom was also noticed in relation to other embalmed bodies of an earlier period. The bones of Louis the Eighth, surnamed the Lion, the father of St. Louis, who died on the 8th of November, 1226, at the age of forty, were nearly reduced to dust On the stone which inclosed his coffin was sculptured a cross in low relief, and within was found only a decayed wooden sceptre and diadem, or band of stuff of cloth-of-gold, with a species of satin cap, tolerably well preserved. He had been wrapped in a shroud of cloth-of-gold, beneath which was a dress of thick leather; and as his body was the only one thus encased, it is probable this mode of preservation was had recourse to that no unpleasant odor might issue from it in bringing his remains to St. Denis, from Montpensier, in Auvergne where he died, on his return from the war against the Albigenses. The coffin of St. Louis was shorter and narrower than most of the rest, and none of his mortal part was found within, his bones having been taken out when he was canonised. In the course of their search elsewhere, no part of the abbey church being left unexamined, the ruthless explorers came upon the tomb of Philippe le Bel, who died in 1314. His coffin was of stone lined with lead, and covered by a broad slab, traversed with thick iron bars. The skeleton was entire, and to one finger-bone still clung a gold ring; by his side was a copper-gilt sceptre five feet long, termiminated by a tuft of foliage, on which rested a King Dagobert, which had been in the abber church, which he founded, eleven hundred and fifty-five years. It was upwards of six feet long, and the stone had been hollowed to receive the head, which was separated from the body, though, unlike the last of the kings of France he had closed his life decapitated. Within the length, lined throughout with lead, and contain ing the bones of "Le bon Roi," and those of his wife. Nantilde. A silken envelope wrapped the remains of each, which were kept distinct by a dividing board. On one side of the coffer was a leaden tablet with this inscription : "Hie jacet corpus Dagoberti," and on the other a similar tablet bearing the words, "Hic jacet corpus Nantildis." The queen's skull could not be discovered, and it is probable it remained in the place of his first interment, Saint Louis having removed the bones of Dagobert and his wife to the new tomb which he provided for them. The exhumation of King John, the poliators of 1793. It was all over now with Saint Denis, either as a place of sepulture or a place of worship; in its roofless condition it was used as a markethouse, nor did it resume its ecclesiastical character for twelve years. Napoleon then took an interest in its restoration, intending to make the sepulchral vaults of the Carlovingian linefor he recognized only the imperial house of Charlemagne—the mausoleum of the Bonaparte family. How that design was frustrated, every one knows. When the Bourbons came back for the second time, in 1815, and had time to look about them-a privilege scarcely allowed them on their first return-Louis the Eighteenth began in earnest to restore the tombs of his ancestors and re-decorate the time-honored abbey church, which, after death, had been their sylum. He was the last Bourbon king buried there, and at his funerul all the old customs attendant on royal funerals were revived.

TALE OF THE GREAT SARATOGA TRUNK.

Old Anthracite has a very dear wife-so dear that she costs him on her own private account about fifteen thousand dollars a year. Mrs. Anthracite always has the latest fashions, so when the great Saratoga trunk was exhibited in Broadway, Mrs. A. instantly purchased one for her summer trip.

Every one knows that the great Saratoga runk is an unexceptionable trunk. It is coossal-of Titanic proportions. Cheeps, the builder of the great pyramid, might have found ample accommodation for her entire household in the great Saratoga trunk.

Accordingly down went Mrs. A. to the great watering-place, with her great trunk. She had not been long there, however, when old Anthracite received a private telegraph from a friend to inform him that Mrs. A. was flirting desper-ately with young Belzebub, the son and the heir f old Belzebub, the soap boiler. Anthracite nstantly takes the train, arrives at the hotel, and, inquiring the number of his wife's room, quietly walks up stairs. His wife's door is shut Anthracite knocks. Door opens after some delay. Mrs. A. fluttered, which flutter increases to dismay when she sees her husband. Husband enters coolly; explains that he just came to see how she was getting on, and seats himself on the Saratoga trunk. Drops a glove, the picking up of which enables him to look under the bed. No one there. Mrs. A. looked as it some one ought to be there. Husband satisfying the vengeance of the revolutionary mob, eager to wreak their brutal fury on all the down to a little light conversation, when old Anthracite remarks quietly :

"Mrs. A., there's a rat in your trunk." Mrs. A. turns pale through her paint. No: husband is mistaken. The rat is in the wainscot. They are always there, those rats. Husband is sure it is in the trunk. He smells him ; he will examine. Mrs. A., very anxious, he should not. He can't. The trunk is shut, and she has lost the key. Husband begs to contradict. The key was in the lock—the lid was

Husband, amid the protestations of Mrs. A., half raised the lid. No crinoline, no shawls, no lace, no furbelows in the great Saratoga trunk only young Belzebub's glossy curls and killing moustache are visible. Mrs. A. instantly faints. Its the privilege of her sex, on such occasions. What does husband do? Shoot young Belzebub? Not a bit of it. He smiles grimly and shuts the lid down again, locking the great Saratoga trunk. He rings the bell; tells the waiter to bring a gimlet. Bores a few holes in he great trunk. Orders up the porter, and goes off to New York accompanied by the great Saratoga trunk. What would the trunk not have given for a cigar in a baggage wagon, when t smelled the tobacco smoke that was so liberal ly puffed about! The trunk, although nearly suffocated, thought it best to keep quiet. Arrived at New York, old Anthracite told the people at the depot, loud enough for the great Saratoga trunk to hear him, that he would leave his baggage at the office for a few days when he would send for it. This was more than the great trunk could bear, so it kicked, shouted and made a noise until it was broken open, and to the amazement of everybody, poor Belzebub crawled out in a limping condition. He tried to tell the people that twas done for a bet, but somehow the truth leaked out, and I predict that next summer there will be fewer great Saratoga trunks at the Springs. I think old Anthracite had the best of it, don't you?

Do all in your power to teach your children elf-government. If a child is passionate teach him by gentle means to curb his temper. If he is sulky, charm him out of it by frank good humor. If indolent accustom him to exertion, and train him so as to perform even onerous duties with alacrity. If pride comes in to make obedience reluctant, subdue him by councel or discipline. In short, give your children the habit of overcoming their besetting sins.

A Milwaukee banker has made sundry arithnetical calculations concerning a national debt of four thousand millions, from which it appears that if our debt should reach that amount, the column of dollars would be five thousand five hundred and seventy and two-fifths miles in height; that it would take one hundred and thirty-eight thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine teams to carry the silver, allowing one ton to each; and the length of the line of teams would be three hundred and ninety-four miles.

The Best Time to Insure.

To provide against loss of property which may at any time consume all your means, you secure a policy without delay for the requisite amount; why not therefore provide immediately in part, for a greater loss to your family, the life upon which all its members depend for their support and protection? Therefore, the time to take out a Life Insurance Policy, is now.

VODE STREET

What if I Should Die To-Night? Let each one ask himself this question: Suppose I should die to night, what provision have I made to secure the comfort of life to those who are dependent on me for their daily suste nance? Would those who are dear to me be safe from the pangs of want? Would this wife and these aged parents, be independent of the cold charities of this world? Would these children, committed tn my care, have a comfortable home and the means of education? Would there be no eacrifices of property by forced sales, to meet the demands of creditors, or the wants of those I leave behind me?

These evils could be prevented by calling on the agent of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, W. K. VAN ALEN, on the CORNER OF SANSOME AND WASHINGTON STREETS and get a Policy of Insurance on your life for $5,000 or $10,000, and in case of your sudden death you have made a proper provision for your family. CITELE M M A STO ANDRIE

I Cannot Afford to Insure My Life.

FORTY-FIVE CENTS A WEEK will insure $1,000 on the life of a man aged 30. Is the ultimate fate of your wife and family a matter of such perfect indifference to you as not to call for a sacrifice amounting to even less than half a dollar a week? And if, with your present income, you are unable to make such provision for them, how will they bear the double bereavement, when left without you and without your in-

The well known and Practical Mohel,

OF SACRAMENTO CITY, FOR YEARS PAST, Takes pleasure in informing his co-religionists that he has settled himself in this city, where he will continue in the practice as 570 and Teacher, and will be happy to rece ive a share of patronage of the Israelites of San Francisco. He also takes this opportunity of returning his sincere thanks to his numerous friends in the interior, who have honored him with their confidence, and would respectfully solicit their continued confidence and fa e's.

As to his experienced and successful practice in the capacity as למהל, he only needs to refer to the following gentlemen well known in this city: Dr. John F. Morse, Brenham Place; J, Greenbaum, Esq., (H. Cohn & Co.) 413 Sacramento street; Louis Sloss, Esq., No. 100 O'Farrel street; Henry Ahpel, Post street.

Further information may be obtained by addressing Z. Newstadt at No. 568 Mission street near corner of Second street San Francisco, or by inquiring of Mr. H Kozminsky No. 322 Sansome street between Sacramento and California, under whose care also letters from the interior may be directed.

This certifies that I have witnessed experience.

This certifies that I have witnessed several circumcisions performed by the Rev. Z. Newstadt, in the city of Sacramento, and that they demonstrated his competency to operate promptly and securely.

The Remedy for Curing CONSUMPTION. COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, CROUP,

Diseases of the Throat, Bronchitis, Pains and Oppression of the Chest or Lungs, Difficult Breathing, and all the Diseases of the Pulmonary

TTS ACTION IS EXPECTORANT, ALTERAtive, Sudorific, Sedative, Diaphoretic and Dinretic, which renders it one of the most valuable remedies known for curing diseases of the lungs. It excites expectoration, and causes the lungs to throw off the phlegm or mucus; changes the Secretions and Purifies the Blood; heals the irritated parts; gives strength to the digestive organs; brings the liver to its proper action, and imparts strength to the whole system. Such is the immediate and satisfactory effect, that it is Warranted to Break up the most Distressing Cough in a few hours' time, if not of too long standing. It is Warranted to give entire satisfaction even in the most Confirmed cases of Consumption! It is Warranted not to produce costiveness (which is the case with most remedies) or affect the head, as it contains no Opium in any form.
It is Warranted to be Perfectly Harmless to the most delicate child, although it is an active and powerful remedy, for restoring the system. There is no Real Necessity for so many Deaths by Consumption, when Allen's Lung Balsam will prevent it, if only taken in time.

Sold by all Druggists. Price $1 per bottle.

CUPID'S ADVICE.

Come pack up love's missives
And quickly go forth,
For Cupid will sure
With his servants be wroth.

If amorous tokens This Valentine's morn, Are not speedily, promptly, To fond lovers borne.

When the little birds begin To bill and coo, and jocund Spring Casts flowers o'er the sunny earth, And makes it ring with joyous mirth

Then fond youth's own Love's power divine, Each maiden takes a Valentine, Who his fond vows to her doth plight, To prove her constant faithful knight. Then is the painter's art required

To paint fond emblems, love inspired, Cupids, hearts, doves and radiant flowers, Altars of love and fairy bowers.

The Poet also lends his aid,

By him love's torments are portrayed.
In flowing verse and moving strain,
Fair maiden's pitying heart to gain. These beauteous leve-traps all should sure

This feast of Valentines procure,
And all fond lovers should know where
To buy love tokens rich and rare. To Appleton's if they will go

They will behold a gorgeous show— Every conceivable device. Tasteful and rich at lowest price. All who would Love's feast celebrate Should go at once to 508, Montgomery Street, and purchase there Valentines for their ladles fair.
Also at 620 Market Street
A host of Valentines their eyes will greet.

November 21st, 1864. A. KOHLER, Esq: My Dear Sir-In all my concerts n California, I have used W. B. Bradbury's Pianos. Their tone is very brilliant, combined with a mellowness and delicacy I have never met with in any other American instrument. I cheerfully commend them to the public as instrument which cannot fail to give the greatest satisfaction.
